

MeisterTask Template

Gaining access to the template does, of course, require you to sign up for MeisterTask. While there is a free version, it does take a few minutes to register for an account.

The link to the template is a public link. In other words, if someone makes edits to the template, it changes for everyone. Therefore, it's best to create a copy from this template so people can then tailor the copied project to their practices without impacting anybody else.

I have a hard time believing that everyone will remember to duplicate the template so we might want to put our heads together to determine what we can do to try and prevent that from happening and causing confusion. One idea is to create a PDF deliverable with clear instructions for accessing the public template.

FREE TEMPLATE

Jake kindly provided a public link to his MeisterTask template for attendees to use in their practice as a starting point: meistertask.com/projects/rxyzx0uu0h/join/
